

During the height of train travel, railroad companies wanted to set their trains apart. To do this, they had exclusive designs created for their dining car's plates, cups, bowls, and tea sets. Mary Colter designed the Mimbrenño china pattern for the Santa Fe Super Chief's dining car, the Cochiti. She drew inspiration for the design from the pottery of the Mimbres Indians of Southwestern New Mexico.